

'Architects on Architecture'

A Lecture Series for Architects supported by Istock Brick Ltd

Heneghan Peng Architects Talk Architecture

Tuesday 4th March 2008 – Newcastle University

heneghan.peng.architects are a firm that boldly chooses to pursue the most ambitious commissions. Whilst they have completed few projects, the scope of what they're involved with is huge. They have completed a major Irish civic complex, known as Aras Chill Dara and the architects' continuing work on the $320-million Grand Egyptian Museum is really causing a stir. Scheduled for completion in 2011, the museum and cultural complex promises to be a real gateway between the sophisticated modernity of Cairo and the ancient splendor of the Pyramids. More recently heneghan.peng.architects were triumphant in a competition to design the Carpenter's Lock footbridge for the 2012 Olympic park, despite facing tough opposition.

Both Shih-Fu Peng and Roisin Heneghan graduated from Harvard Graduate School of Design, before moving onto work for Michael Graves & Associates. Shih-Fu Peng also worked for Skidmore, Owings & Merri before he joined forces with Roisin Heneghan to found heneghan.peng.architects in 1999. Originally founded in New York, heneghan.peng.architects have been based in Dublin since 2001.

heneghan.peng.architects are the second speakers for the new 'Architects on Architecture' lecture series, which is sponsored by Istock Brick Ltd and supported by both Newcastle and Northumbria Universities.
