Welcome to RIBA

RIBA at 66 Portland Place is situated in the heart of central London, located between the buzz of Oxford Street and the tranquillity of Regent's Park. It is easily accessible from all London's major attractions; including museums, theatres and restaurants.

The Grade II listed, Art Deco building is a regal backdrop for events, for groups ranging from 6-400. We host conferences, dinners, parties, meetings, fashion shows, weddings, Bar/Bat Mitzvahs and more. Plus, as a charity, all profits go into supporting our work of advocating better and more sustainable buildings, communities and the environment through architects and our members.

We have two beautiful terraces providing fantastic views of London and our versatile spaces all have natural daylight, providing you with a vibrant meeting and entertainment space.

To make an enquiry, or to find out more information about any of the spaces, including menus and floorplans, please email venues@riba.org

Venue details to look out for

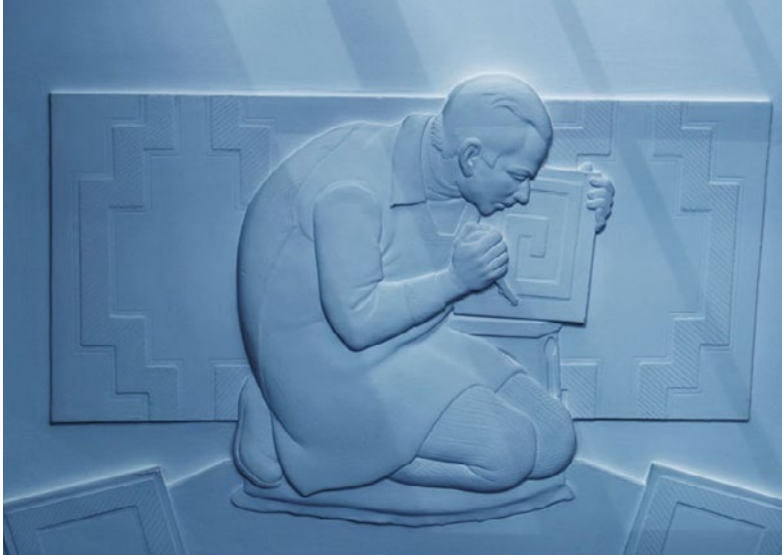

The Royal Institute of British Architects (RIBA) was founded in 1834 for “the advancement of architecture”. One of the early aims of the building was to provide a library of architectural works.

RIBA opened at 66 Portland Place in 1934 by King George V and Queen Mary and today we are home to one of the world's largest architectural collections spread across multiple locations.

The lions of the RIBA Crest can be found throughout the building in different materials - in glass on the staircase balustrades and in iron on the exterior railings.

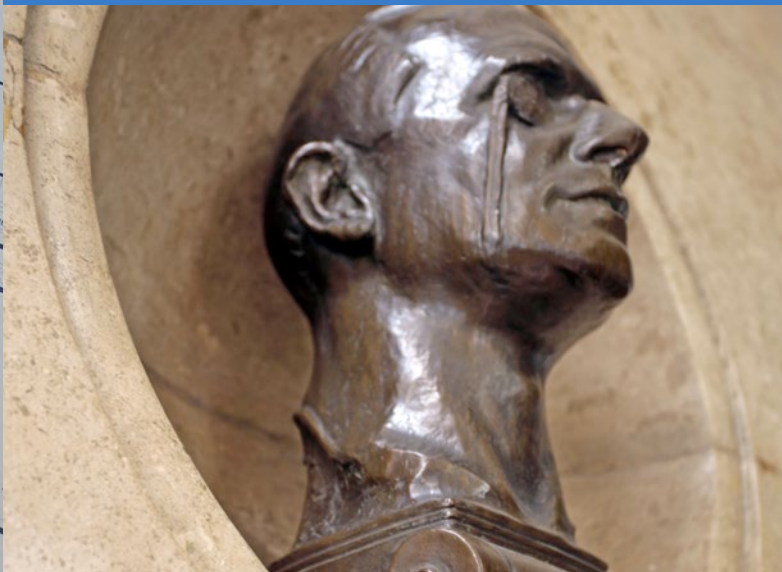

The building has many decorative features and stone carvings, which not only give character, but also represent the architecture trade and the construction of the building. You will notice plaster ceiling reliefs in the Florence Hall of electricians, plumbers, bricklayers and engravers.

Children of the architect and sculptor James Woodford feature in the pools on the bronze entrance doors.

The bronze bust of the architect, Grey Wornum shows him wearing a monocle – this was not just for fashion, Grey Wornum was wounded during the Battle of the Somme in WW1, losing his right eye. Look out for this in a small alcove beside the staircase in the entrance hall.

Catering

Our in-house, award-winning caterer CH&CO help to bring each event together, providing first class service, but above all, delicious food, full of flavour and presented ahead of the curve in a modern and innovative way.

Choose from an array of vegan and plant-based dishes to gluten or dairy free, our chefs create inclusive, customisable menus that support specific dietary requirements and lifestyle choices.

“It was wonderful working with you and the team on our Annual Dinner. We have had so much fantastic feedback and our President, Chief Executive, and Senior Management Team have all expressed their gratitude. The venue looked fantastic and worked brilliantly, the food and wines were excellent and the service equally fantastic. We are, in short, thrilled with how it went.”

Conferences

Our landmark venue combines Grade II listed grandeur with modern facilities and state of the art technology. Our bright, flexible conference spaces can accommodate everything from small meetings to largescale, bespoke conferences of 400 delegates theatre style.

“We couldn’t be happier with how it went and received so much wonderful feedback from so many different people, commenting on the event space and the organisation. Richard was a real star in sorting the AV and the food and drink went down well by all accounts.”
